

Investing for your Future

November 2007, Guernsey: At Deutsche Bank in Guernsey, all of our staff share a 'Passion to Perform'. For that reason, we recruit young, bright, ambitious people who are ready to take on a challenge and play an important role within our global network.

Our Summer Internship Program offers those currently at university the opportunity to undertake paid work experience during their vacation. As part of the Program, Interns are given a full introduction to Deutsche Bank and undertake specific mentored assignments within our various business areas.

Emily Hibble is one student who took advantage of the scheme this summer. Currently studying for a degree in Business Management and German, Emily decided to apply for the scheme to gain some practical experience of working in banking.

Emily's Internship during her summer vacation saw her take up a role in the Business Management team in Fiduciary Services. After receiving some introductory training, she was given two projects to complete, which required her to undertake research and chair regular meetings. She was also assigned her own mentor, who was always on hand to offer her support and guidance:

"My organisational and time management skills have really improved", she admits. "I have also learned to deal with a range of different people and improve my communication skills - speaking over the phone or via e-mail, sometimes in German!"

Emily also found time to socialise with her colleagues - even taking a trip over to Herm to give her a chance to get to know them better.
